Ebenezer United Methodist Church

Hebron vicinity

Public worship

Formally known as the Ebenezer United Methodist Church, this single-story gable-front frame church was erected around 1870, and it is one of two historic structures that define the rural community of Rockawalkin. The congregation traces its organization to 1839, although a Methodist chapel is located in this area as early as the mid 1790s, as indicated on Dennis Griffith's Map of the State of Maryland.

The 1870 church is similar to other third quarter of the nineteenth-century structures with basic references to the Greek Revival style. Although covered with artificial siding, the rectangular frame church has a gable-front principal elevation trimmed with wide corner pilasters. The interior is lighted by leaded glass windows that were added at a later time. A twentieth century church hall has extended the original building and more than doubled its size. The church is joined on the lot by a nineteenth- and twentieth-century cemetery bounded by a decorative iron fence.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Rockawalkin Church, formally known as the Ebenezer United Methodist Church, stands at 6777 Rockawalkin Road southeast of Hebron, Wicomico County, Maryland. The church faces northwest with the gable oriented on a northwest/southeast axis.

Dating around 1870, the single-story gable-front frame church is supported on a continuous brick foundation that includes an excavated cellar. The church is sheathed with aluminum siding, and the steeply pitched roof is covered with asphalt shingles. Attached to the northeast side is a single story hyphen and lateral church hall that gives the entire building a rough H shape.

The northwest elevation, which faces Rockawalkin Road, is a gable-front facade with a small gable roofed vestibule centered on the three-bay wall. A double-door entrance is topped by a single-pane frosted glass transom. Small single pane sash windows pierce the sides of the vestibule. The entrance vestibule is flanked by rectangular colored glass windows. The wall is otherwise sheathed with aluminum siding. Corner pilasters as well as the extended eave and sloped soffit is wrapped in aluminum.

The southwest side is marked by three rectangular colored glass windows. An exterior entrance to the cellar is accessed by a set of brick steps.

The southeast (rear) gable end is largely covered by a later single story addition, and a modern hyphen and church hall are attached to the northeast side. Colored glass windows from the original church, were repositioned in the addition.

Located on the southwest side of the church is a nineteenth and twentieth century cemetery surrounded by a decorative iron fence incorporating a double door gate on the northeast side. Tapered fence posts, topped by bulbous finials, anchor a pair of gates distinguished by curled iron decoration and arrow pointed vertical rods.
